Anguilla, October 23, 2019 – Anguilla’s top culinary resorts - CuisinArt Golf Resort & Spa and sister property The Reef by CuisinArt - announced today the appointment of new Executive Chef Juan Bochenski. The five-star resort duo will reopen following their annual closure on October 27, 2019, welcoming guests for the fall and winter season with new menus and culinary concepts crafted by Chef Bochenski.

With nearly three decades of distinguished culinary experience in the luxury hospitality sector, Chef Bochenski will oversee the diverse dining program backed by local ingredients, sustainable practices and the world-class culinary technique synonymous with the CuisinArt family of resorts on Anguilla.

Chef Bochenski joins CuisinArt following his recent successful post as Executive Chef at Jade Mountain and Anse Chastanet Resorts in St. Lucia, where he oversaw multiple concept restaurants and skillfully led a team of 60 chefs and stewards. The Argentinian-Australian chef has crafted a career devoted to perfecting every dish and creating new explosive flavors to delight discerning travelers.

Having held top roles at renowned hotels and restaurants worldwide, he has mastered diverse cuisines and culinary styles, from modern French delicacies and Asian-style bites, to unique dishes drawing on the finest local ingredients. This wealth of experience is ideally suited to CuisinArt Golf Resort & Spa and The Reef by CuisinArt, whose diverse dining program and seven distinct restaurants feature menus drawing on both Anguilla and exotic cuisines.

CuisinArt Golf Resort & Spa and The Reef collectively boast seven restaurants each rooted in a unique global cuisine, ranging from Japanese at Tokyo Bay to Mediterranean at Santorini and Spanish-Latin at The Reef’s Yacht Club and Breezes restaurants. In his new role, Chef Juan is deeply passionate about further diversifying the culinary teams at the resorts’ dining venues to bring their specific regional cuisine to life. Each restaurant will be overseen by chefs who possess deep knowledge and backgrounds rooted in its specific cuisine, creating a foundation of authenticity that will resonate with guests and delight the discerning palettes of CuisinArt’s well-traveled clientele.

CuisinArt’s Tokyo Bay restaurant will expand its menu to include dishes ranging from authentic ramen with house-made noodles, to dumplings subtly spiced with Anguilla’s West-Indian flavors. The resort’s open-air Mosaic restaurant will highlight the flavors of the Caribbean with family-style dishes showcasing Jamaican and Anguillan flair. The resort’s Beach Bar and Grill will offer casual cookouts, fresh salads, fish and ceviche – the ideal pairing to savor with toes in the warm white sand of Rendezvous Bay. The Reef by CuisinArt's Yacht Club restaurant will set sail across the Atlantic toward Spanish and Latin preparations showcased through local West Indian ingredients.

"We are thrilled to welcome Chef Bochenski to the CuisinArt family on Anguilla," said Stephane Zaharia, President & Managing Director of The Resorts & Residences by CuisinArt. "With his true passion for cooking and impressive hands-on experience at top resorts around the globe, we are certain that he will bring the energetic, innovative spirit and bon vivant enthusiasm that is key to our culinary philosophy."

Chef Bochenski will also assist in developing Chef's Table menus, cooking classes and Festive Season programming that will draw on the specific regional traditions which inspired each of the resorts' restaurants: the Mediterranean at Santorini, Japan and Asian at Tokyo Bay, Caribbean-centric at Beach Bar and Grill, Jamaican and West Indian at Mosaic, and Spanish-Latin at The Reef's Yacht Club restaurant.

"I have known and admired CuisinArt for a long time, and it is an honor to be able to join the team and bring my own culinary visions to such a notable destination," said Chef Bochenski. "I look forward to passing on my knowledge and cooking expertise earned throughout the years to my new team while embracing their skills and cultivating an environment that thrives on collaboration, shared principles, and a passion for food that will keep guests returning to Anguilla year after year!"

CuisinArt Golf & Spa and The Reef will reopen on October 27, 2019 following their annual seasonal closure. For additional information on resort menus and dining, or to book, visit www.cuisinartresort.com and www.thereefbycuisinart.com.
